Plane Crash Kills 98 in Indonesia

INTO THE FIRE: Indonesian air force personnel rush to the site where a military cargo plane crashed in Magetan, East Java, Indonesia, on Wednesday. At least 98 people were killed when the plane nose-dived in a residential area, once again putting the spotlight on the Southeast Asian country's poor aviation safety record. ❖ Panic: Survivors recount the horrific crash | Page 9

Obama Rebuked On Gitmo

Senate emphatically rejects transferring detainees to U.S.

WASHINGTON | In a rare, bipartisan defeat for President Obama, the Senate voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to keep the prison at Guantanamo Bay open for the foreseeable future and forbid the transfer of any detainees to facilities in the United States.

The 90-6 vote came on the heels of a similar move last week in the House, underscoring widespread apprehension among Obama's congressional allies over voters' concerns about bringing detainees to the U.S. The president readied a speech for Thursday on the fight against terrorism.

Obama has vowed to close the prison by January 2010, and the Senate's vote was not the final word on the matter. It will be next month at the earliest before Congress completes work on the legislation, giving the White House time pursue a compromise.

But Obama's maneuvering room was further constrained when FBI Director Robert Mueller told a congressional panel that he had concerns about moving detainees to U.S. prisons. Among the risks is "the potential for individuals undertaking attacks in the United States," said Mueller. (AP)

CURRENCY

Because $1 Coins Are So Successful

Pennsylvania State Police are looking for a man they say sweet-talked a shop owner into accepting a fake $20 coin as payment for ice cream. Police said the man told the proprietor of Willow Tree Ice Cream in Lykens on Friday that the coin was something the government had just begun issuing. The suspect drove away in a teal Dodge Caravan with Pennsylvania tags. He's described as short and stocky with curly black hair. (AP)

Fire officials in Bellevue, Wash., said a sunny day and a dog's glass water bowl combined to cause a blaze that charred the back of a home. Bellevue Fire Department Lt. A Very Long Snake Or a Very Short Boy

Pittsburgh police say a high school student is facing charges for using a biology class snake as a jump rope. The boy will be charged with theft and cruelty to animals. The animal survived the ordeal and was being examined by a veterinarian. Pittsburgh Public School officials on Tuesday were not immediately able to say what kind of snake it was. (AP)

Ala. Police Fired Over Beatdown

5 officers are caught on tape pummeling an unconscious man

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. | Five Birmingham police officers were fired Wednesday for beating an unconscious suspect ejected from a car after a chase, an attack captured on a patrol car videotape that didn't surface publicly for a year.

Warren

Police Chief A.C. Roper said the officers were seasoned veterans but acted in a "shameful" manner.

The video shows police pursuing Anthony Warren's van on Jan. 23, 2008. One officer on foot was hurt when the van swerved through traffic. It overturned on a ramp, ejecting Warren, who lay motionless as officers ran toward him. The video shows them beating him with their fists, feet and a billy club.

Roper said the department had "terminated 50 years of combined service due to 10 seconds of injustice." (AP)

Police Hunt for Boy Fleeing Chemo

Forces nationwide on alert for mom, son who are on the run

SLEEPY EYE, MINN. | A courtroom clash between medicine and faith took a criminal turn, with police across the country on the lookout Wednesday for a Minnesota mother who fled with her cancer-stricken 13-year-old son rather than consent to chemotherapy for him.

A court-ordered X-ray on Monday showed a tumor growing in Daniel Hauser's chest, and doctors said it will probably kill him without medical treatment.

Before she took off, Colleen Hauser told a judge that she wished to treat her son's cancer with natural healing methods advocated by an American Indian religious group known as the Nemenhah Band. But even that group's founder said Hauser made a mistake by running from the law.

Authorities in Minnesota said they were following a number of leads on the whereabouts of mother and son, but gave no details.

"I just wish we could get to Colleen and tell her to come in. This is not going to go away. It's a court order," Brown County Sheriff Rich Hoffmann said.

Daniel has Hodgkin's lymphoma, a highly curable form of cancer when treated with chemo and radiation. But the teen and his parents rejected chemo after a single treatment, with the boy's mother saying that putting toxic substances in the body violates the family's religious convictions.

"I just wish we could get to Colleen and tell her to come in. This is not going to go away."

BROWN COUNTY SHERIFF

The Hauser family had been ordered to appear before a judge Tuesday for a hearing to consider chemo. But mother and son failed to show, and a warrant was issued for the mother's arrest.

An alert issued to police departments across the country said mother and son might be traveling with a California lawyer named Susan Daya. The alert said they might also be with a man named Billy Best, who as a teen in 1994 ran away from home to escape chemotherapy for cancer similar to Daniel's. AMY FORLITI (AP)

California Out of Options

State's budget crisis will force lawmakers to make painful cuts

LOS ANGELES | Now what? With few tricks up their sleeves, Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger and state lawmakers agree they can no longer avoid deep cuts to schools and government services after California voters rejected their special election budget proposals.

"I think the message was clear from the people: Go all out and make those cuts and live within your means," Schwarzenegger said in Washington, D.C., on Wednesday, one day after voters rejected a complex slate of propositions that included a spending cap, higher taxes, borrowing and raiding money from programs dedicated to young children and the mentally ill.

California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger is facing a huge budget shortfall.

Tuesday's ballot defeat was resounding, with two-thirds of voters rejecting the five budget-related propositions. Defeat of the measures means California's deficit for the fiscal year that begins in

“I think the message was clear from the people: Go all out and make those cuts.”

July will grow from $15.4 billion to $21.3 billion.

Schwarzenegger has proposed shortening the school year by seven days, laying off up to 5,000 state employees and taking money from local governments, a move that will directly affect police and firefighting services.

"I don't think there is any way to avoid significant across-the-board cuts," said Senate Majority Leader Darrell Steinberg, D-Sacramento. "Nothing will be immune from cuts." JUDY LIN (AP)

President to Sign Credit Card Bill

Legislation will have huge impact on how the industry operates

WASHINGTON | Americans will see sweeping new limits on credit card companies that try to raise interest rates or take other steps that leave consumers deeper in debt, but cardholders who pay off their balance each month may face new fees or lose out on lucrative rewards programs.

Congress wrapped up the legislation Wednesday and sent it to President Obama, who plans to sign it on Friday. The bill will revolutionize the market by restricting when and how a card company can raise an individual's interest rate, who can receive a card and how much time people are given to pay their bills.

In general, the new rules —

700

The number of credit cards, in millions, the Nilson Report estimated were in circulation in the United States in 2007, more than two cards for every man, woman and child in the country.

which go into effect in nine months — will protect debt-ridden consumers from many of the surprise charges common in the industry, such as over-the-limit fees and costs for paying a bill by phone.

"This cements a victory for every American consumer who has ever suffered at the hands of the credit card industry," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

But there will be losers, too. Banks will need to make up the cost somewhere, and cardholders who pay off their balance each month could see new annual fees and rewards programs canceled.

Some of the changes, including a requirement that cardholders receive 45 days' notice before their rates are raised, are already on track to take effect in July 2010 under new regulations by the Federal Reserve. The legislation would put these changes into law and go farther in restricting when and how banks charge people and who could get a card.

For example, the bill would require people under 21 to prove first that they can repay the money or that a parent or guardian is willing to pay off their debt if they default. ANNE FLAHERTY (AP)

Tehran Tests-Fires a New Missile

Launch seen as show of strength by Iran's president before vote

TEHRAN, IRAN | Iran test-fired a missile capable of striking Israel, U.S. Mideast bases and Europe on Wednesday — a show of strength touted by President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad as he battles for reelection next month against more moderate opponents.

The U.S. responded by saying Iran must choose between destabilizing the Middle East or accepting the dialogue offered by President Obama. The U.S. leader threatened earlier this week that Iran could face further international sanctions if it does not respond positively by the end of the year to U.S. attempts to open negotiations on its nuclear program.

Israel said the test appeared to be Iran's response to a positive meeting on Monday between Obama and new Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

U.S. Defense Secretary Robert Gates confirmed the launch, and Pentagon spokesman Bryan Whitman said in Washington that Iran is at a crossroads and must choose its course.

"They can either continue on this path of continued destabilization in the region, or they can decide that they want to pursue relationships with the countries in the region and the United States that are more normalized," said Whitman.

Alex Vatanka, a senior Middle East analyst at Jane's Information Group, said the test was likely intended to send a message to the Obama administration that Iran cannot be bullied into talks.

Myanmar Opens Trial To Envoys

Military junta allows diplomats, reporters into Suu Kyi's hearing

YANGON, MYANMAR | Democracy leader Aung San Suu Kyi thanked diplomats for their support Wednesday after Myanmar's military government agreed to allow them and several journalists to attend her trial. They said she seemed to be in good health. One described her appearance as "awe-inspiring."

The Nobel Peace laureate, who has been in detention without trial for more than 13 of the past 19 years, is accused of violating the terms of her house arrest after an American man stayed at her home without official permission. The offense is punishable by up to five years' imprisonment.

Critics say the bizarre charge of hosting an uninvited foreign intruder is part of a plot by the military regime to keep Suu Kyi, 63, locked up during elections scheduled for next year.

Wednesday's decision to allow 29 diplomats and 10 journalists into the hearings was a surprise. Diplomats at the hearing said Suu Kyi looked alert and in good spirits. (AP)

A car bomb exploded Wednesday near several restaurants in a Shiite neighborhood of northwest Baghdad, killing 41 people and injuring more than 70, police and hospital officials said. Video evidence recorded by fighter jets and the account of the ground commander suggest no more than 30 civilians were killed in a two-day battle in western Afghanistan this month, the U.S. military said Wednesday, a stark contrast with Afghan claims that 140 civilians died. The footage shows insurgents streaming into homes that were later bombed, said Col. Greg Julian, the chief U.S. military spokesman in Afghanistan. (AP)

Irish Report Details Child Abuse

9-year inquiry reveals assaults were common at Catholic institutions

DUBLIN | A fiercely debated, long-delayed investigation into Ireland's Roman Catholic-run institutions says priests and nuns terrorized thousands of boys and girls in workhouse-style schools for decades — and government inspectors failed to stop the chronic beatings, rapes and humiliation.

Nine years in the making, Wednesday's 2,600-page report sides almost completely with the horrific reports of abuse from former students sent to more than Kevin Flannigan, the brother of an abuse victim, shouts at officials who investigated abuse at Irish schools after he was turned away from a press event Wednesday.

250 church-run, mostly residential institutions. But victims' leaders said it didn't go far enough — particularly because none of the abusers was identified by name.

The investigators said consistent testimony from still-traumatized men and women, now in their 50s to 80s, had shown beyond a doubt that the entire system treated children more like prisoners than people with legal rights.

The leader of Ireland's 4 million Catholics, Cardinal Sean Brady, offered immediate apologies, saying, "I am profoundly sorry and deeply ashamed that children suffered in such awful ways in these institutions."

More than 30,000 children deemed to be petty thieves, truants or from dysfunctional families — a category that often included unmarried mothers — were sent to Ireland's austere network of industrial schools from the 1930s until the 1990s. SHAWN POGATCHNIK (AP)

'CLIMATE OF FEAR'

Excerpts from the report by Ireland's Commission to Inquire Into Child Abuse:

→ "A climate of fear ... permeated most of the institutions and all those run for boys. Children lived with the daily terror of not knowing where the next beating was coming from."

→ "In some [girls'] schools a high level of ritualized beating was routine. ... Girls were struck with implements designed to maximize pain ... on all parts of the body. Personal and family denigration was widespread."

Indonesian Plane Crash Kills Scores

At least 98 dead after military aircraft slams into residential area

MAGETAN, INDONESIA | An Indonesian military plane carrying troops and their families caught fire and nose-dived into a residential neighborhood Wednesday, killing 98 people and putting the spotlight back on the country's poor aviation safety record.

More than a dozen people were injured. Many had severe burns.

Survivors said they heard at least two loud explosions and felt the C-130 Hercules wobbling from left to right as it careened to the ground. The transporter slammed into a row of houses and then skid-ded into a rice paddy, its fuselage completely shattered.

"People were screaming hysterically as the plane was going down. We were being thrown around all over the place," Pvt. Saputra told Internet news portal Detik.com. "Then it just blew up, and I found myself lying in a field, 20 yards from the wreckage."

"Fire was rising up to the sky," said Saputra, who suffered head and arm injuries. "I just submitted myself to God."

Military spokesman Sagom Tamboen said the transport plane, built in 1980, was carrying at least 110 passengers and crew on a routine flight from the capital.

It was not clear what caused the crash. AGUS BASUKI (AP)

The John Hancock Tower in Boston, above, sold at auction for just over $20 million on March 31. Skyscrapers nationwide are falling victim to the real estate crunch.

Skyscrapers Going At Cut-Rate Prices

Iconic buildings have lost millions in value because of defaults

NEW YORK | The 40-story skyscraper sits on a prime corner in the country's wealthiest commercial market, steps from the Museum of Modern Art, and a few blocks from Rockefeller Center and Central Park.

It recently sold for $100,000.

The 1330 Avenue of the Americas building — which sold for close to $500 million three years ago — was auctioned last month for the minimum to a Canadian pension fund unit after its owner defaulted on a $130 million loan.

A month before that, the John Hancock Tower — Boston's tallest skyscraper — sold at auction for just over $20 million. The 33-story Equitable Building in downtown Atlanta is set to go up for auction next month; its owners owe more than $50 million to the bank.

Loan defaults in the worst commercial real estate market in decades have created tens of billions of dollars worth of distressed properties across the U.S., sometimes forcing cut-rate auctions of landmark skyscrapers. Developers are falling behind on mortgages as tenants leave and can find no financing to cover payments, analysts say.

So, they are selling skyscrapers at a drastic discount, with the condition that the new buyer take on the enormous amounts of debt connected to the properties.

The Hancock Tower and the Sixth Avenue building are the first of a wave of foreclosures and auctions expected in the next year that will slash sale values of formerly prime real estate, analysts say.

"This is a train wreck that's coming in the large office towers," said Matthew Haines, chairman of the Propertyshark.com real estate Web site. AMY WESTFELDT (AP)

TRANSIT Cheap Way Out Amtrak is cutting fares by 25 percent on some Eastern trains this summer as the railroad looks to boost demand during the recession. The discount runs from June 2 through Sept. 3. (AP)

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said U.S. banks are raising capital.

Geithner: Economy Is Healing

Banks have raised $56 billion in capital in wake of stress tests

WASHINGTON | Declaring that the financial system was "starting to heal," Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said Wednesday that major banks had raised $56 billion since stress tests showed several in need of more capital — a sign of emerging investor confidence.

Geithner also said a public private program announced in March to rid institutions of their worst assets would be in place by July.

The hopeful assessment was laden with caution, however. Geithner pointedly warned the committee that he would not discuss an "exit strategy" for the government's $700 billion intervention in major private-sector institutions.

"It's not quite time yet," he told Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala.

In written testimony provided to the committee, Geithner said that of the $56 billion raised by the nation's biggest banks since they underwent stress tests, $48 billion had been raised by banks deemed in need of additional capital. That puts them nearly two-thirds of the way to their government-imposed goal of $75 billion in new capital.

Faulty Work Cited in Main Break

Incorrect installation blamed for pipe tear in Bethesda in 2008

A large water main break that flooded Bethesda's River Road in December and required motorists to be rescued by helicopter occurred because the 66-inch pipe was incorrectly installed directly against jagged rock 44 years ago, according to a consultant's analysis released Wednesday.

The contractor did not lay the concrete pipe in the required bed of gravel, which is used to cushion the pipe to prevent cracks and other corrosion, the report found. A 4-foot tear was found in the part of the pipe that had been laid directly against the rock.

Officials for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission said the findings raise larger concerns for their 5,500-mile system, primarily whether there are similar problems with other pipes the same contractor might have installed. WSSC officials said they are pulling 1965 records for that segment of pipe to find out what, if anything, the utility's inspector noted about the installation.

"This is just the first part of our investigation because it raises all sorts of questions," said Teresa Daniell, the WSSC's interim general manager. "What other projects did this contractor do, and where are they?" KATHERINE SHAVER (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Mei Xiang Still Just A Tease

For 3rd-straight year, National Zoo panda has a false pregnancy

You can put away the panda bunting for at least another year. The National Zoo announced Wednesday that its female giant panda, Mei Xiang, is not pregnant. The panda, for the third year in a row, had experienced a false pregnancy.

Zoo scientists had been keeping what has become an annual pregnancy vigil for Mei Xiang for several weeks, monitoring her hormone levels and behavior, and conducting ultrasound tests to see whether she was pregnant.

On April 20, her level of urinary progesterone, a hormone associated with pregnancy, began to decline. Upon reaching baseline levels, this decline would end in either the birth of a cub or the end of a false pregnancy.

On Tuesday, with the hormones at baseline and no fetus visible on the ultrasound exams, zoo researchers determined that Mei Xiang was not pregnant. MICHAEL E. RUANE (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Wiz Must Make Their Own Luck

Wise: Lottery leaves the team in need of a big move to contend

WIZARDS | I am playing Powerball tonight. And because I have a better chance of perishing in a plane crash or being struck by lightning, I will not win. I know this.

Yet, because the seductive lure of making a very good life even better seems worth a few dollars, I still play. And lose.

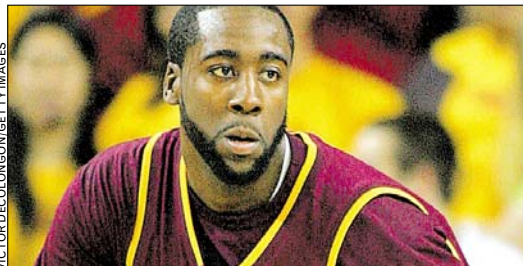

It's not exactly wagering 63 losses on the NBA Draft Lottery, hoping beyond hope that one special young player will alter a franchise's future. But, really, the Wizards have to feel almost as hopeless as if they had just penciled in a bonus number at a convenience store, no?

They played David Stern's multi-state game Tuesday night, gambling like the rest of those NBA degenerates — the Kings, the Clippers, the Grizzlies, the Thunder. And — news flash — they lost, finishing with the worst pick they could have at No. 5, four spots from Blake Griffin and Lotto nirvana.

No. 5 once brought Kevin Garnett to Minnesota. Today, it brings hand-wringing and headaches to Washington, whose pro basketball team again learned a hard lesson when they don't get to play in May: This is what happens when you leave your fate to chance. This is what happens to all the fools at the gaming tables who get this far down. They chase money with luck, and when luck betrays them, they're left with an unproven young kid who might or might not be as good as their bevy of other young kids.

It says here Ernie Grunfeld moves that pick and neither Arizona State's James Harden nor Arizona's Jordan Hill makes it to Wash-

The Wizards' best draft options

VICTOR DECOLONGI/GETTY IMAGES

1 JAMES HARDEN, ARIZONA STATE This might be a case of taking the best available player. He proved an effective scorer in college, especially with strong moves around the basket. The real question: Does Washington need another shooting guard?

JAMIE SQUIRE/GETTY IMAGES

3 TYREKE EVANS, MEMPHIS While the latest one-and-done Tiger doesn't offer much help in the way of size, he could stabilize a backcourt that still has DeShawn Stevenson in a starting role. Many think a true point guard next to Gilbert Arenas would be a big help.

Falling to fifth is going to make Grunfeld work harder than he has ever worked before to bring in a bona fide veteran presence.

ington. Grunfeld has too much at stake to wait for the organization to develop another kid who's not yet ready for prime time.

The era of Gilbert Arenas, Caron Butler and Antawn Jamison will end without so much as a trip to the Eastern Conference finals if the Wizards don't trade for a capable big man or a savvy scorer off the bench this offseason.

LeBron James and Dwight Howard are not getting worse. Atlanta is not getting slower. With Garnett, the Celtics have probably two years before they fall off the contender map — again. For this Wizards group, the time is now.

Falling to fifth is going to make Grunfeld work harder than he has

WIN MCNAMEE/GETTY IMAGES

2 JORDAN HILL, ARIZONA At 6-foot-10, 235 pounds, Hill looks the part of what the Wizards need. But the word "power" doesn't necessarily come to mind when talking about this forward. Not yet, anyway. His potential does appear to be vast, though.

4 TRADE FOR A VETERAN This may very well be the most likely of scenarios. The Clippers seem to have a glut of big men, and that was before they won the Blake Griffin sweepstakes. In a weak draft year, though, the No. 5 pick may not be worth very much.

Blackhawks Attempt to Regroup

Down 2-0, Chicago hopes home ice will revitalize its effort

STANLEY CUP | A stinging overtime loss still fresh on their minds less than 24 hours later, the Chicago Blackhawks were hoping to rest and regroup Wednesday.

They already knew how difficult it would be to beat the defending Stanley Cup champions and now face an even more daunting assignment against the Detroit Red Wings: rally from a 2-0 deficit and win four of the next five games.

Chicago winger Andrew Ladd offered some solace Wednesday

from his experience with the Carolina Hurricanes three years ago during a run to the Stanley Cup.

"I just think you don't want to panic," Ladd said. "I know in Carolina, our first round against Montréal the year we won, we lost our first two games at home and ended up winning that series in six."

But this is the conference finals and it's the Red Wings. And even though the Blackhawks are counting on the roar of the United Center to give them a boost, they have to find a way to play better.

"Every little inch against this team you have to work for," Chicago's Jonathan Toews said.

Vick Begins Life Outside of Prison

Suspended NFL star to serve remainder of term in his Va. home

RICHMOND, VA. | Suspended NFL star Michael Vick left a Kansas prison before dawn Wednesday to begin home confinement in Virginia, one of his attorneys said, the latest step on a journey that Vick hopes will lead to his reinstatement.

Vick, who turns 29 in June, slipped past waiting cameras and reporters undetected to leave a federal penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kan., after serving 19 months for financing a dogfighting ring.

He was headed to Virginia by car to begin two months of home confinement at his five-bedroom house in Hampton before a scheduled release from federal custody

Michael Vick, seen here apologizing for his role in a dogfighting ring two years ago, left a Kansas prison on Wednesday. He hopes to be reinstated into the NFL.

The traveling party also includes a videographer recording the journey, the person said, although what Vick plans to do with the footage has not been announced.

The drive from Leavenworth to Hampton is expected to take about 19 hours.

"It's a happy day for him to be starting this part of the process," said Larry Woodward, Vick's Virginia-based attorney. "He looks forward to meeting the challenges he has to meet."

Ultimately, Vick's goal is to rehabilitate his image and return to the NFL, but Woodward said his first priority "is spending time with his children and his loved ones." HANK KURZ JR. (AP)

NFL May Expand the 'Rooney Rule'

NFL | The NFL is considering expanding its minority interviewing rule to include openings for general manager positions as well as head coaching vacancies, Commissioner Roger Goodell said at the league's owners meetings in Fort Lauderdale Fla., Wednesday.

The rule currently requires any team with a head coaching vacancy to interview at least one minority candidate.

It is widely known as the "Rooney Rule" after Pittsburgh Steelers owner Dan Rooney, the chairman of the league's workplace diversity committee, and has been credited for the increase in the league's number of minority head coaches in recent years. Goodell said he will discuss the matter further with Rooney, and the rule could be expanded soon thereafter.

British folk-rocker John Wesley Harding has always been known for having too much wit, brains and talent to confine himself to music. That's why he's a best-selling author under his given name, Wesley Stace, and why he and his band, the Minus Five, are teaming up with equally ironic and absurdist comedian Eugene Mirman for Wes & Eugene's Cabinet of Wonders. The traveling variety show features a rotating group of performers and musicians; we're getting a stripped-down version at Iota on Saturday.

How did you come to do tours with comedians and such?

Well, we've done it around America, so I know exactly how this works now. Started off, I was in New York and I did these three shows called the Cabinet of Wonders, and the idea was to bring together my writer friends and my music friends, because my writer friends all want to be rock stars, and my music friends want their words listened to. It's a really cool tour because you get to hang out with your friends, but you also get to see what your friends do, and you get to see how each city reflects the show.

Speaking of variety, your Web site noted you're a fan of both Henry Purcell and Cat Stevens.

Purcell is kind of a bit of an obsession of mine, and my third novel [coming out this year] is about a composer who writes the first great English opera since "Dido and Aeneas." ... Singers like myself — folk singers or pop singers or whatever — there's a real kinship with the baroque because it's based on the same song structures as I use.

As for Cat Stevens, I just think he's — despite some occasionally overly optimistic and rather empty lyrics — I just think he was the great voice of the singer-songwriter movement. Which was a very interesting moment, after Bob Dylan, when people said, "We don't want to reach for the stars like Bob Dylan; we want to write about our lives." A lot of that music was about approaching maturity.

How do you think folk music has changed since you started?

“It's a really cool tour because you get to hang out with your friends and ... see what your friends do.”

Well, that's what "Top of the Bottom" is about on my album. The game has changed since I started, and I'm lucky I get to keep doing it. ... That song was about what's happened to music, and making it a funny and entertaining critique.

With all your other projects, will you continue to write, record and perform music?

I will have to, because I don't think any record labels are going to come in and say, "Hey, it's 1992. Let us give you lots of money that we will probably never get back."

"There are no long, dusty speeches," says playwright Karen Zacarías of her new comedy "Legacy of Light," currently housed at Arena Stage in Crystal City.

Indeed, the play begins with a make-out session, then a sword fight. The duelists in question: philosopher Voltaire (Stephen Sch-netzer) and St. Lambert (David Covington), lovers of Émilie du Châtelet (Lise Bruneau), a brilliant mathematician and physicist.

Zacarías came across Émilie while researching another play about Einstein. "I was interested in her scientifically ... historically ... emotionally," she said.

The play includes both and 18th- and 21st-century plots. In the former, Émilie discovers at age 42 that she is pregnant with the youthful St. Lambert's child. Fearing she will die in childbirth, she crams as much scientific discovery as she can in the months she thinks she has left.

Lindsey Kyler (Pauline) and Lise Bruneau (Émilie) in "Legacy of Light."

In the second plot, Olivia (Carla Harting), an astrophysicist, discovers a possible planet in formation and then decides she wants to form a life of her own.

The struggles hit close to home to the D.C.-based Zacarías, who wrote the play while pregnant with her third child. "We're still dealing with how parents balance their personal aspirations with being a good parent," she said. "There's still that same tension."

The convergence of the two plots late may require some suspension of disbelief in a play that is largely historically accurate, but the cast of immensely likeable characters oozes with charm. ERIN TROMPETER

SHERVIN LAINEZ

Singer-songwriter Jenny Owen Youngs kick-started her career with a foul-mouthed single, but she has mellowed since.

Folk Was I

Sweet-faced folkie Jenny Owen Youngs has a fresh mouth and a dancier sound

MUSIC | Some folkies want you to cry. But more and more, Jenny Owen Youngs just wants her audience to groove.

The smoky-voiced indie musician made a big first impression with the audacious, waltz-time dirge “F Was I,” which drew comparisons with Alanis Morissette for its unapologetic use of profanity and no-holds-barred chorus. Youngs’ sparsely arranged debut CD, “Batten the Hatches,” seemed influenced by thoughtful types like Sufjan Stevens and Ani DiFranco.

But once she hit the road with a band, out went introspection and in came extroversion. So expect folk with some funk when the New Jersey native plays the Rock and Roll Hotel this weekend, because on her new album, “Transmitter Failure” (due out May 26), Youngs’ music is more about rump-shaking than heart-breaking.

“The idea was to make a record that would be more fun to play live because ‘Batten the Hatches’ was a little low-key,” says Youngs by phone during a tour stop. “I’ve been listening a little more to what

Once she hit the road with a band, out went introspection and in came extroversion.

I’d call rock-pop records. I was listening to a lot of Strokes and a lot of Motion City Soundtrack and Ludacris while I was writing and while we were recording.”

So Youngs set about writing new music that “would feel good and make for fun shows.

“Having feelings is nice and connecting with a song emotionally is great,” she explains. “And I love downer music — it was a huge part of my life at one point. But now I just wanna move around, you know? I wanna rock.”

If any indie musician has a reason to dance these days, it’s Youngs. After playing in high school bands and majoring in music in college, she put out a debut CD by herself and sold it on CD Baby like millions of other musicians. But a lot of people liked what they heard. And some of those people were in high places. They helped place

Also in 2007, Youngs began to make like Bob Dylan during his “Another Side” period and cozied up to pop-friendly music. Her “Take Off All Your Clothes” EP that year featured a cover of Nelly’s “Hot in Herre” that was as unexpected as it was danceable. Just in case anyone thought the cover was a goof, a ripping live rendition was also included. The EP helped expand Youngs’ audience beyond the mopey folkie crowd.

“We just kind of decided that was the most ridiculous thing we

“I LOVE DOWNER MUSIC — IT WAS A HUGE PART OF MY LIFE AT ONE POINT. BUT NOW I JUST WANNA MOVE AROUND, YOU KNOW? I WANNA ROCK.”

“F Was I” on the Showtime comedy “Weeds,” which kicked Youngs’ career into high gear.

“It was sort of like a culmination of a bunch of things starting to happen all at once,” Youngs explains. “I got contracted by the Nettwerk label and another label or two, and Lynn Grossman, who has a music placement service called Secret Road, started working the record. Also, my publisher entered the picture. All of those people converged on the delicate heart of Gary Calamar, the music supervisor of ‘Weeds.’”

Having D.C. photographer Shervin Lainez sing her praises to celebrity blogger Perez Hilton didn’t hurt either. In 2007, Hilton added some of Youngs’ videos to his site at the behest of Lainez. And as Miss California recently learned, when you get involved with Mr. Hilton, people notice you.

Youngs says the posts about her by the self-proclaimed “Queen of All Media” yielded “a lot of attention all at once,” as opposed to her “Weeds” forum, which became “a gift that keeps on giving.” People still discover her music, she says, when they rent the second season of “Weeds” on DVD.

could think of [to cover],” Youngs says, referencing her band.

“I had been doing a lot of silly pop songs for a while, like a lot of Britney Spears, because I love pop music and it was time for something new. We ended up recording it for a split 10-inch that came out in the U.K., and then the label got really into it and put it out in a digital EP, and people really responded to it.”

Youngs admits her scatological debut single was born out of an experience that included “some really regrettable romantic happenings.” But she’s no messenger of doom. As an interviewee, she’s very amusing, peppering the conversation with self-effacing quips and pop-culture references.

“I’ve always been really drawn to awesome melodies,” she says. “My parents listened to a lot of Beatles and Beach Boys and oldies radio, and that was what planted the seed for my love of music.”

More Than 'Just Rock'

Richmond rockers Carbon Leaf can do it all; they just have trouble describing it

MUSIC | In June 2001, Carbon Leaf frontman Barry Privett was asked a seemingly harmless question by a young reporter from his hometown of Richmond: "What's your music like?"

He paused, took a moment and replied: "Acoustic, electric-mandolin rock with a Celtic groove tinge to it."

Say that phrase to the 38-year-old lead singer today and he'll chuckle. "It's your fault we've been pigeonholed!"

Whoops. Well, then; take two: "The best I can come up with is that we're just a rock band. That's it. I gave up on being cute and specific with the monikers."

"Just a rock band"?

A bland answer, for sure. Still, it would be wrong to take that to mean the latest album, "Nothing Rhymes With Woman" (Vanguard), by the five-piece band — guitarists Terry Clark and Carter Gravatt, drummer Jason Neal and bassist Jon Markel — is generic.

Whatever the band is calling its sound now, it can still be described as "acoustic, electric-mandolin rock with a Celtic groove."

Think of it more as a progression of tunes you can dance to, but not necessarily jig to.

The group's bouncy mandolin- and tin whistle-speckled hit "The Boxer" has been swapped out for more sing-songy, open chord tracks such as "Miss Hollywood."

When Carbon Leaf plays the 9:30 Club on Friday, it will be returning to a familiar stage, but with some new faces: Longtime drummer Scott Milstead was replaced by Neal in July 2007, and Markel joined last fall after bassist Jordan Medas left in August. It's Carbon Leaf's music is more a progression of tunes you can dance to than ones you can jig to.

the first time the group's worked the national road circuit in two years, says Privett, in part to get everyone in sync.

"We really wanted to take a step back and become a better band. Get everyone working together musically, tightening up. ... Making music for the right reasons and making sure it's something we're proud of and happy with before anything else."

Makes sense. Just whatever you do, don't call it "Celtic."

A Time to Remember

And some clothes to forget at Rosslyn's '80s outdoor film fest

FILM | Now that the decade has been deemed nostalgia, '80s film festivals are catching on. AFI has one coming later this summer, but in the meantime, enjoy the I (Heart) the '80s Rosslyn Outdoor Film Festival every Friday at dusk through Labor Day. (Leg warmers not required, unless there's a cold snap.)

This is a public space, so expect teen comedies such as "Meatballs" (Aug. 28) and blockbusters like "Footloose" (June 26).

Aside from their popcorn value

"Back to the Future" looks like ancient history in a world with "Superbad."

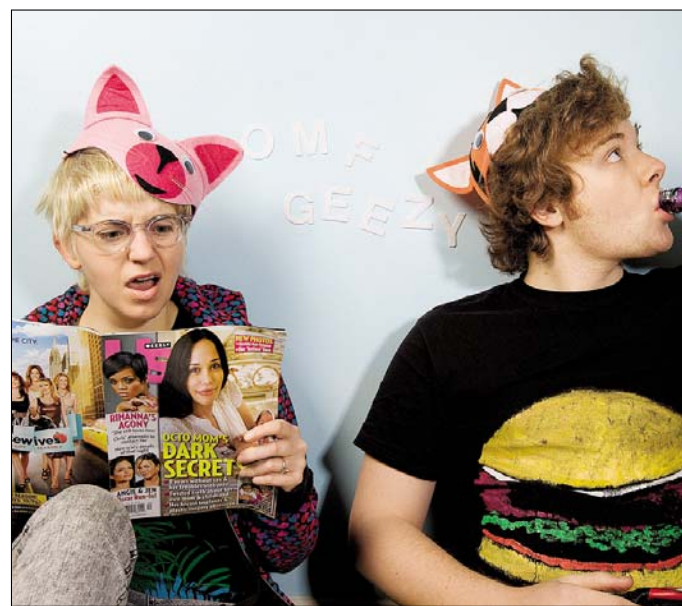

(it's BYOP), it's possible to enjoy these films as cultural touchstones, particularly now that the

John Hughes/Gen-X crowd is approaching middle age. Instead of goodbye, "Big Chill," hello, "Breakfast Club" (June 12) it's goodbye, "Sixteen Candles" (May 22), hello, "Superbad."

Not that the boomers are forgotten in these films: Most of "Back to the Future" (July 17) takes place in 1955, and the musical highlight of "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" (Sept. 4) is the Beatles' "Twist and Shout." Also expect fashion atrocities, cheesy synth music and pre-show '80s-themed games. PAUL STELTER

Napalm Death keeps its grindcore political after 28 years of making brutal rock

MUSIC | Mark "Barney" Greenway is sometimes like Billy Bragg — just a lot louder.

The singer for British grindcore pioneer Napalm Death shouts down societal ills, but rather than placing his anger next to gentle pop, Greenway & co. blast a brutal form of music that owes as much to '70s working-class punk as it does to '90s extreme metal.

But Greenway has no desire to enter politics. "Mainstream politics stinks, man, it really does," Greenway said in a thick Birmingham accent. "The power structures ... that are in place at the moment give the people in power more rights than you and me have, and how can that be right?"

For more of our interview with Mark Greenway, visit expressnightout.com | ONLINE NOW

That's why Napalm Death has soldiered on for 28 years, weathering a dizzying array of lineup changes — Greenway, 39, joined in 1990 — while maintaining a remarkably consistent vision.

"My approach is no different ... from when I was 19 when I joined Napalm," he said. The quartet's last album, "Time Waits for No Slave," is another bracing broadside against injustice, and Greenway's lyrics are as furious as ever.

"When I apply myself to lyrics, I think really, really deeply," said the son of a trade unionist. "I don't wish to sound pretentious, but I would like to be connected to my art."

Greenway's anything but pretentious, which is one of the reasons fans still clamor for Napalm Death's latest blast beats: The band expresses the frustrations of everyday people who feel disenfranchised by money, power and greed. It's a Sisyphean task to keep rolling that ball of hate up that hill, but Greenway's the man for the job.

"I won't give up," he said. "Everyone gets dejected at points, demoralized. But I think, at the end of the day, the ultimate aim for me, along with other people, is I want to live in a world that's peaceful and tolerant and a bit more equal. That's it right there, and if that's the end point, there's still a long way to go."

The Art Studio As Lab

Yuriko Yamaguchi's work melds science, art and philosophy

GALLERY | There's something almost science fiction about Yuriko Yamaguchi's show at the Adamson Gallery. The carefully constructed networks of industrial wire, resin and plastic tubing feel like they should be in a laboratory instead of in a sleek gallery space.

Not that there's anything monstrous about the sculptures. On the contrary, these light-filled creatures are opaque and ethereal. Certain works come close to representing organic shapes, including two works titled "Bubble" (No. 1 and No. 3), composed of shorn plastic tubing, glue and resin, which call to mind cells, crystals and other structured life forms. "Season of Change," a hanging sculpture of cast resin drops and steel, brass and copper wire, arranged in cloud-like formations and vortices, appears capable of growth beyond the gallery walls.

"She's trying to re-create a natural world," says Adamson assistant director Erin Boland. "She's drawn to and inspired by these scientific texts and ideas, but what comes out, for her, is more related to a personal realm."

Yamaguchi's artist statement references the impact of her mother's death in 2008 and her quest for, well, the meaning of life. It's heavy stuff to impose on a seemingly small show, but her forms do attempt to bear that burden, taking the shapes of the things that make up life. DANIELLE O'STEEN

Classically Up-to-Date

Paul Simon brings his friends, a guitar and a lifetime of songs to a live DVD

DVD | When the Library of Congress honored Paul Simon at the Warner Theatre in May 2007 as the first recipient of its Gershwin Prize for Popular Song, one would think the main obstacle was how to cram all those songs into one evening. As the new DVD "Paul Simon and Friends" (Shout! Factory, $19.98) shows, the Library of Congress squeezed 22 performances in under two hours.

It's anyone's guess why Bob Costas was tapped as host, but his description of Simon's music as "classical and contemporary at the same time" is spot-on. And as Simon's book "Lyrics 1964-2008" indicates, he's been walking that line for quite a while. The other head-scratching moment has to be Grover and Elmo's singing "Feelin' Groovy"; perhaps it's a thank-you for his old "Sesame Street" appearances.

Paul Simon's night of glory at the Warner Theatre is documented in a musical DVD.

COURTESY/SHOUT!FACTORY

"Graceland" era gets a lot of play via some 1980s footage of Simon and Miriam Makeba, as well as an onstage reunion with Ladysmith Black Mambazo, who do some Shaolin-style synchronized high-kicking during "Diamonds on the Souls of Her Shoes."

"Paul Simon and Friends" squeezes 22 performances in just under two hours.

Much of the show focuses on Simon's gospel influences, and in fact the DVD's highlight is Simon's singing "Loves Me Like a Rock" with Stevie Wonder on piano and the Dixie Hummingbirds on call-and-response vocals. (Wonder received the second Gershwin prize this past February.) It's probably best to stop the DVD here, as the closing credits feature Philip Glass turning "Sounds of Silence" into a silent-movie chase-scene score. PAUL STELTER

Lakeside Humor

The Lutheran eccentrics of Lake Wobegon get a gander at the big city — well, its bucolic outskirts — when radio's "A Prairie Home Companion" stops in at Wolf Trap on Friday. The long-running show is full of folksy humor, sly jokes, sharp observations, a terrific variety of music and, over it all, the sonorous

3 voice of host and creator Garrison Keillor.
→ Wolf Trap, Filene Center, 1645 Trap Road, Vienna; Fri., 8 p.m., $22-$48; 877-965-3872, wolftrap.org.

Ice Princess vs. Mystery Man

A beautiful princess with a beheading fetish! A mysterious suitor with a secret

5 past! The greatest tenor aria in the history of opera! If the Washington National Opera's "Turandot" isn't dramatic enough for you, check your pulse.

→ Kennedy Center, 2700 F St. NW; through June 4, $45-$300; 202-467-600, kennedy-center.org. (Foggy Bottom-GWU)

KARIN COOPER

1 Class Actor

In 2007, the lovely, winsome performer who calls herself St. Vincent asked listeners to "Marry Me," and the response, as they say, was overwhelming. Young hipsters pledged themselves to Annie Clark, the woman behind the Saint, and to the sweet, sour, slightly eerie stripped-down rock she makes. St. Vincent brings songs from her latest, "Actor," to the Black Cat on Friday.

→ Black Cat, 1811 14th St. NW; with Lo Moda, Fri., 9 p.m., $15; 800-551-7328, blackcatdc. (U St.-Cardozo)

2 A Red Stapler Day

Got a case of the Mondays? Then put on your flair and come by the Arlington Cinema 'N' Drafthouse on Thursday for the Bi-Annual TPS Report Managers Meeting, aka the "Office Party" fest. Mike Judge's cult comedy takes center stage in a night of costume and impersonation contests, trivia, music and, of course, the film.

→ Arlington Cinema 'N' Drafthouse, 2903 Columbia Pike, Arlington; Thu., 7 p.m., $8; 703 486-2345.

Dress-Up, Seriously

Jeff Huntington's supremely strange, unsettling and beautiful paintings are up at Reyes + Davis Independent Exhibitions only through 4 Sunday, so scurry over to F Street to catch sight of his "New Paintings" before they're not so new anymore. These works depict children — unguarded and off-kilter, the way children are in repose — incongruously dressed as ancient nobility and other characters from art history.

“EXHILARATING.”

‘Wolverine’ is well-acted, with spectacular action and witty one-liners. Although it’s a quintessential popcorn movie, ‘Wolverine’ is not mindless. Director Gavin Hood and Hugh Jackman bring depth to a comic-book tale of anti-heroes with anger issues. Jackman invests his fierce character with...clear-eyed intelligence and inherent decency, compelling viewers to care about his metamorphosis.”

Claudia Puig, USA TODAY

3507 Connecticut Avenue, NW
Washington, DC • 202-237-2777

Craving Pad Thai? Have a hankering for Drunken Noodles and Mango Sticky Rice? Jump on the Red Line metro and head for Cleveland Park to check out the hip new spot that's quickly earning a loyal following, both in the neighborhood and beyond. Paragon Thai is sleek and lovely, and the service is gracious and friendly. The chef turns out authentic Thai cuisine—spiked with fragrant sweet basil, lemon grass, coconut milk, and spicy chili—that's as impressive on the plate as it is on the palate. The menu is extensive, with delicious dishes for every taste, including lots of great seafood and vegetarian options. Start with cool and delicious Green Papaya Salad with grilled black tiger shrimp or crunchy Crab Wontons with just a hint of sweetness. Then treat yourself to one of the chef's specialties, such as succulent Spicy Crispy Duck, Soft Shell Crab Pad Thai, or delicate and juicy Chicken Pineapple. The curries are terrific, noodle dishes are light and delectable, and everything is spiced to order, from mild to red-hot. The full bar features wine, beer, and fun specialty drinks, like yummy Mint Mojitos. Terrific prices on lunch specials make it the perfect spot for a midday meal, and they deliver, too. What more could you ask for?

In the Great Outdoors

With the warm weather rolling in but the high humidity of summer still a few weeks off, the District is right in the middle of prime outdoor dining time.

FRESH AIR | At the TABARD INN, a city brunch staple, the number of customers looking to have their iced coffee and sugary, fresh-fried doughnuts in the open air has been growing.

"We check the weather daily to see if we can seat people outside," assistant manager Holly Roystone said. "We have customers who would be happy if we served brunch seven days a week."

With a garden patio full of leafy plants, partial shading from an overhead "parachute" and a constantly shifting summer menu incorporating fruit gazpachos and specialty cocktails, the space provides a "kind of oasis in the city," Roystone said.

Places such as ROSEMARY'S THYME BISTRO in Dupont Circle are also seeing their sidewalk seating fill up.

The Mediterranean-influenced dinner options, including a tasty char-grilled and pulled lamb dish, are satisfying and inexpensive. But the happy hour featuring $3 beer and appetizer specials such as bruschetta, hummus and baba ghanoush is what really keeps the loosened-tie crowd happy. The atmosphere is relaxed, making it easy for an early night to turn into a late one.

"We get mostly a neighborhood crowd, a lot of young professionals stopping by in the summer," said manager Mumtaz Durmus.

On the other end of the outdoor dining spectrum is the 35-seat patio at the BOMBAY CLUB, a power-broker hot spot near Lafayette Park. Owner Ashok Bajaj said the District's hot weather pairs up well with the menu's gourmet Indian dishes.

"If you look at that country as a whole, it's generally very warm, isn't it?" he said. "In India, you eat on the verandas. It's very common. That, or you eat in the gardens. It's a good match."

Bajaj said diners tend to prefer fish and other lighter fare on the patio, and he had his own recommendation for dinner outside.

"Tandoori salmon would be perfect," he said, referring to a Bombay Club classic that remains a daily special after two decades. "It's very much like barbecue — it's put on a skewer and cooked in a clay oven."

Bart Vandaele, owner of BELGA CAFÉ, has his own idea of an internationally inspired dish ideal for his restaurant's terrace — "a cool beer and a pot of mussels."

Vandaele's restaurant, with its focus on Belgian food and beer, is located just south of Eastern Market and benefits from the high volume of pedestrian traffic.

"We don't do reservations on the terrace," Vandaeles said. "It frees us up to do more walk-ins there."

Brunch on the terrace features Belgian waffles, of course, but there are a few interesting variations on the theme. The Geiten-Kass, a goat cheese waffle with roasted tomatoes, is savory and herbal, a nice twist on a usual morning confection. A new addition to the spring menu is the "Jack Rabbit" cocktail, a combination of cane run, carrot and orange juices that Vandaele called a good alternative to a mimosa.

This summer, the restaurant will also shift its monthly wine classes outdoors. "It's kind of fun to do it out on the terrace," Vandaele said. ROBERT MARGETTA

SIGNATURE DISH: Boquerones — Spanish white anchovies in olive oil — created by chef José Andrés for Garden Café España.

A Taste of Spain

Chef José Andrés
brings Spanish treats
to the National Mall

OLÉ! Let's face it: Finding a decent lunch on the National Mall is no easy task. But now, a taste of Washington's food scene is available on the well-beaten National Mall path. Through September, the National Gallery of Art is turning over its West Building Garden Café to D.C.'s own celebrity chef José Andrés.

Host of a PBS series and the owner of five Washington restaurants (including Jaleo and Zaytinya), Andrés jumped at the chance to collaborate with Restaurant Associates chef David Rogers on the Spanish-infused tapas menu.

"I have been living in Washington for over 18 years, and I wanted to be part of the culture of the city," said Andrés. "Since Spain is my birthplace, my place of origin, I hold a certain pride whenever there is attention given to the country's culture. Whenever the opportunity comes to help share my heritage with the world, I take it."

CLASSIC: Andrés' gazpacho with peppers, tomatoes, cucumbers and bread.

The inspiration for Andrés' menu hails from the NGA's current exhibition of 18th-century artist Luis Meléndez's still-lives of ripe, fresh foods.

With the café's buffet and a la cart options, Andrés hopes visitors will indulge and experiment with such dishes as Spanish white anchovies in olive oil, sweet meatballs paired with marinated plums, braised short ribs with potato purée and piquillo pepper confit, and a watermelon salad with goat cheese, pine nuts and heirloom tomatoes.

And don't forget the Spanish flan, made from Andrés' mother's own recipe (available on take-away cards for curious visitors). "For me, this recipe is magic," says Andrés. "It has this amazing power to somehow transport me back to being a little kid in my mother's kitchen."

On June 28, the café's menu will shift to reflect more Renaissance- and baroque-era dishes, to correspond with another Spanish-minded show, "The Art of Power: Royal Armor and Portraits From Imperial Spain."

Booze Cruise to the Top

Bradley Cooper's drunken summertime comedy may be his ticket to the big time

ACTOR | Bradley Cooper has returned to the scene of the crime: Caesars Palace, where the actor, his castmates and the crew of the new big-screen comedy "The Hangover" lived for more than a month.

It's here that they portrayed the destruction of a $4,000-a-night hotel suite and, oh, yes, the lives of the film's four lead characters.

"It's weird that it's not weird," Cooper said. "It feels so comfortable being in Vegas."

Directed by Todd Phillips ("Road Trip"), "The Hangover" serves up a bachelor party that goes so wrong, the groom goes missing, perhaps for good.

As the groom's best friend, Cooper returns to on-screen matrimonial mayhem: He played Rachel McAdams' sociopathic boyfriend in 2005's "Wedding Crashers," and earlier this year, he starred as Jennifer Connelly's philandering husband in "He's Just Not That Into You."

If "Hangover" is a box-office winner, it could signal Cooper's leap from character actor to movie star. Such talk makes him a bit fidgety.

"The Hangover' hasn't [even] come out yet," he said. "Grandiose thoughts don't do anything for me. I'm better off just sitting here enjoying this interview with you now. If I start to think beyond that ..."

There are what may be considered to be more concrete signs that Cooper's star is on the rise. He has two more features expected later this year: Sandra Bullock's comedy "All About Steve" and the long-delayed Renee Zellweger thriller "Case 39."

He's also recently scored some serious celebrity press, with a recent People magazine headline:

“You're one movie away from falling off or ascending. That's the beautiful thing about this business.”

"Bradley Cooper Denies Romance With Jennifer Aniston."

"It's completely hilarious," said Cooper, who shared billing, but little else, with the "Friends" actress as part of the huge "He's Just Not That Into You" ensemble. "I met her, like, three times," he said.

Cooper said his phone is ringing more of late, but for how much longer remains to be seen.

"A lot hinges on how well 'The Hangover' does," Cooper said. "You know, you're one movie away from falling off or ascending. That's the beautiful thing about this business."

"The Hangover" opens June 5.

COURTESY OF CELLAR DOOR

Amos is still the mystic goth girl's muse.

Queen of Sin and Drama

Theatrics loom large on a seductive new album from Tori Amos

MUSIC | From the blood-soaked opening thumps of "Abnormally Attracted to Sin," it's obvious that Tori Amos is still the reigning muse for mystic goth girls. The new 17-song collection strikes a balance between Victorian-inspired decadence and mythical pathos.

For all her theatrics, Amos is also the warm and wise sister-goddess, passing on advice she's learned the hard way.

"Abnormally Attracted to Sin," a wild-girl wink of a title if there ever was one, is rife with idiosyncrasies. But when the record hits the sweet slithery spot, its themes of temptation simmer together with wit and heart.

It's a relief to hear something bright and muscular. "Not Dying Today" is a survivor's song, with the secondhand wisdom that music and good friends can ward off death, at least temporarily. MARGARET WAPPLER (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

CORRECTION King Film Roadblocks DreamWorks was planning the first big-screen portrayal of Martin Luther King Jr.'s life, the studio announced Tuesday, but two of King's children immediately threatened legal action because the film deal was brokered without their blessing. DreamWorks touted the project in a press release as the first theatrical motion picture authorized by the estate using King's intellectual property, including copyrighted speeches and other works, as the basis for the film. LEANN WUELLER

With a new album and a plethora of peacoats, Parachute is positioned to win.

A Smooth Landing

Parachute glides onto the mainstream scene with a solid fan base and college degrees

BAND | As college students in Charlottesville, Va., the members of Parachute hoped the band's local fan base would help generate label buzz and earn them a ticket out of school. When Mercury/Island Def Jam signed the group in 2007, however, the label made an unexpected request: finish college.

"They knew it would loom over our heads and saw finishing school as important, whether we knew it or not," lead singer Will Anderson says. Along with his fellow band members — Kit French, Alex Hargrave, Johnny Stubblefield and Nate McFarland — Anderson flew back and forth to Los Angeles to work sporadically on Parachute's first album, "Losing Sleep," until they graduated a year later.

That extra time may have been a blessing in disguise. "Losing Sleep," set for release this week, displays a deep sense of maturity for a debut album. Songs such as "Under Control" and "The New Year" are punchy pop-rock gems, while Anderson's lyrics blend style and smarts in equal parts.

The first single, "She Is Love," was recently added to VHI's rotation after appearing in the May 4 episode of "One Tree Hill." Another song, "Back Again," was aired on the May 19 season finale of "90210."

"They appeal to such a wide audience," Mercury Records president David Massey says. "We see them as a melodic rock band like the Fray. I think we're going to see a long-term impact."

Having wrapped a string of shows with O.A.R., Parachute is slated to perform May 30 on CBS' "Early Show." While plans for a summer tour aren't yet concrete, Anderson and Massey say the band will be on the road all season, including a few July dates with Secondhand Serenade. "We're a road band," Anderson says. "Touring all summer is going to be awesome." JASON LIPSHUTZ (BILLBOARD)

'Earl' Needs a New Home

Ditched by NBC, the series is off in search of greener pastures

CANCELED | "My Name Is Earl" creator Greg Garcia is a writer because he has a way with words.

When asked for his take on NBC's unceremonious cancellation of his single-camera comedy Tuesday, Garcia didn't miss a beat: "It's hard to be too upset about being thrown off the Titanic."

In case the reference isn't obvious, NBC is in fourth place among networks, after a lackluster season in which it launched seven new shows and five of them failed and the other two have not broken out.

Garcia found out NBC no longer wanted his series during a phone call with Jeff Ingold, executive vice president of comedy programming — just 30 minutes before NBC released its schedule to the media.

"They woke me up at 7:30 to let me know," Garcia said. "I e-mailed Jeff Zucker [president and chief executive of NBC Universal] on Sunday, and I never got a response. But this is show business. The writing was on the wall."

But star Jason Lee told Garcia that he would love to continue doing the show — for another network. Garcia said that he will try to sell the show to Fox or ABC. Both have expressed interest in the past. MARIA ELENA FERNANDEZ (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

The Louisville Slackers

Socializing and wealth are high priorities on 'Southern Belles'

LADIES | "Southern Belles: Louisville" (10 p.m., SoapNet) is not the most original title in the world. But the truth-in-packaging version, "The UnReal Non-Housewives of Louisville," just didn't have the right ring.

"Belles" walks a fine line between Southern gentility and the nouveau-riche vulgarity of the "Real Housewives" franchise. Only two (or three) of the "Belles" inspire real hatred at first sight. Shea is a self-professed "daddy's girl" who complains about her fiance, a mere mortal with a human-scale salary, and the fact that he hasn't mortgaged his soul to buy her a ring to match her ego. Kellie is a twice-divorced 32-year-old who moans about her reduced circumstances. She now resides in a house that "could fit into the guesthouse at my old house."

Hadley claims to be a Ph.D. candidate (you don't see too many of those on "The Real Housewives of New Jersey!") who has put her brain in escrow for the duration of this program. Right now, she's specializing in dating and the pursuit of fun.

Emily eschewed the daddy's little princess route and defied her rich father's wishes for her to run his business. She has opted to become a journalist instead. Dad thinks this is a "nightmare."

The Real Officers Of Ohio

COPS | Now in its second season, "Crime 360" (10 p.m., A&E) offers all of the forensic sleuthing of "CSI" but without the Vegas locales or kinky subplots. In fact, the real pleasure of "360" is its no-nonsense police work in unglamorous settings.

Episode 1 takes place somewhere near Cleveland, Ohio. These cops employ a wide range of techniques and gadgetry. They also speak in a gentle vernacular ("if you find something, give me a jingle") lost to TV script writers. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A new idea that comes your way is likely to capture your imagination and have you looking forward to something brighter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You've been relying on the kind of technological assistance that may fail you at any moment. Could you go it alone if you had to?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be able to keep yourself very busy with a plan that is just taking shape and that needs a great deal of personal attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone in charge may be reluctant to give you more responsibility — but you'll be able to prove that you have what it takes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Issues arise at home or at the workplace that have you considering where it is you really belong. Don't get defensive, however.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) That which is certain is rare. Indeed, uncertainty in all its forms will surely reign at this time — and you are no exception.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You know what you want, but you may not know how to get it — or, indeed, even how to ask for it. An honest request is favored.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Passions are rising to the surface at this time, and not because of any one thing but because of several things influencing you at once.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Focus more on the key relationships in your life. Ignore those who matter the most and you'll surely harm yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may be swept up in a cause that you think you believe in wholeheartedly — but the truth is that you have a few well-disguised doubts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't be so quick to rush to another's aid that you forget to address your own major issues — and a few demand immediate attention.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You can expect your reputation to get a boost, owing to an accidental success that wins you a great deal of attention.

HORROR Police Shocked That Show Is Still On

Police in Colorado Springs, Colo., say a driver being followed by bounty hunter DUANE "DOG" CHAPMAN during filming for his reality TV show was involved in a rollover crash. It's not clear whether anyone was hurt. Colorado Springs police say Chapman's daughter called them to say the man was trapped inside the vehicle early

There's nothing like a TV crew to help in a high-speed chase.

Tuesday. But police say the man got out of the car and ran away and hasn't been found. Chapman is the star of A&E's "Dog the Bounty Hunter." Authorities say he and a television crew were pursuing a man wanted for failure to appear on a narcotics charge. (AP)

Actor RIP TORN has been given probation in a drunken-driving case in Litchfield, Conn. The 78-year-old was approved Tuesday for admission into an alcohol education program. The judge says Torn must be retested for his driver's license because of his severe hearing impairment. The actor will still be allowed to drive. (AP)

'80s Nostalgia an Early Symptom of Turning 40

CHACE CRAWFORD is stepping into the starring role in the remake of "Footloose." The "Gossip Girl" actor will reprise the role that made Kevin Bacon a heartthrob back in 1984. Zac Efron originally was set to play the part but dropped out of the project in March. (AP)
